Sunday-Schools Among Those Awarded Pennant

PADUCAH, KY., November 1st.—Rain marred last night's session of the Kentucky Sunday-school Association, but the enthusiasm overshadowed the loss in attendance. Today is the last day of the forty-seventh annual convention, and, in the election of officers, J. B. Weaver of Louisville, who could not attend owing to illness, probably will be re-elected President. The next meeting place is left to the State Committee, which accepts invitations until the first of the year, but, according to rotation, Lexington is entitled to the 1913 convention and likely will be selected. The social feature of the day was a visit to Jackson Hill sanatorium, Paducah's tuberculosis hospital, the ride being made in automobiles. Counties that have paid their portion to the State Sunday-school work were awarded pennants tonight. There were fifty free from this debt, Mason county heading the list.

The pennants were presented by General Secretary George A. Joplin.

AFTERMATH OF SHOOTING

Miss Mabel Dunn Doing Nicely,
Although Badly Wounded

The unfortunate shooting and wounding of Miss Mabel Dunn Hallowe'n night by Mr. Best Gault was the subject of general comment in the unity yesterday and was greatly deplored by everybody.

Miss Dunn, though badly wounded,
is displaying great nerve and fortitude.
The attending physicians used the X-Rays yesterday and found the ball embedded in the muscles under the shoulder blade, which will probably be removed today.

The report from the hospital this morning conveyed the glad intelligence of the patient having had a restful night and was bright and cheery and doing nicely.

The parents of the wounded girl,
Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Dunn of Noblesville, Ind., arrived yesterday and are attending the bedside of their daughter.

Miss Dunn's room at Wilson Hospital is a veritable flower garden of loveliness being tokens of love and sympathy sent by friends in this city and elsewhere.

Mr. Joseph Best Gault, now in Jail charged with shooting with intent to kill, is a kindly, pleasant faced gentleman. He is very much depressed over the unfortunate and distressing occurrence, and is very solicitous regarding the condition of Miss Dunn.

At a meeting of the City School Board on Thursday evening, Mr. William Outten was elected custodian of the Forest Avenue School Building to fill the vacancy of Mr. Charles Cooper, deceased.

Raises Corn and Chickens on Great White Way

NEW YORK.—A real country farm on Broadway in which vegetables of all kinds thrive, and which chickens serenely pecking at the soil undisturbed by the roar of subway trains above, and the din of traffic below, sounds more like the fancy of one of the city's rich men than the realization of the ambition of an Italian fruit stand keeper. The farm with an ancient two-story frame house occupies 500 square feet in a triangular plot on Broadway between Manhattan street and West One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street. The triangle is inclosed by a ten-foot board wall except on One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street, where there is a low, rustic fence. Thousands of persons from the elevated subway structure at Manhattan street have viewed this rural scene with interest, and have wondered who the city farmer could be.

Mirth Before Audience, a Fight Behind Scenes

CHICAGO.—"Gigantic and glorious festival of mirth and melody." "A brilliant half-hour mosaic of musical comedy, superbly staged." "Ten dainty, dimpled Broadway beauties. Just like the French cabarets."

That's what a local theater bill says about a skit before the footlights there.

Municipal Judge R. F. Robinson saw part of the show the other day and is inclined to doubt the veracity of the bill. It was given a piecemeal staging before him in the Hyde Park police court. His program read:

Defendant—Frank Griffith; known in the skit as "Josh Kidder, a waiter who knows his business."

Plaintiffs—Lillian, Bertha and Ida Lewis, dancers, and Mrs. Bessie Lewis, their mother, the first three being known in the skit respectively as "Lotta Racket," "Louise Louder" and "Perona Snow."

The "heavies" were Detectives McGuire and Rank, who made the "pinch."

"Lotta Racket"—I mean Lillian Lewis—to the bar," ordered the judge when the cars were up. Trip tripped with a big picture hat.

"was this way, judge," she said, "was out doing my dancing stent when I heard a scream back of the wings. I just knew it was Frank Griffith beating mother, so I ran off without finishing my act to help her. Half of the company had attacked her, and her screams were so loud the stage manager had to ring down the curtain to keep the audience from thinking there was a fire.

"Then they laid for us outside in the alley after the show and tried to beat us up again. We broke about even, though, I guess. Then mamma went to the police station for protection and had 'Josh'—that is, Frank—arrested. All the trouble started because his wife don't like people of our race."

"Yes, it was awful, judge," Mrs. Lewis and the two daughters chimed in, while Griffith tried to give his side of the affair.

Judge Robinson listened for a while and then ordered silence.

"It must have been a gigantic and glorious festival of mirth and melody," the judge said, reading the program.

"It was so much so that I'm going to let you settle it among yourselves. These back-of-the-stage fights are too much for an ordinary judge to attempt to square. I'll discharge the prisoners."

so you will see that I get a nice profit from my bees, when you consider that they cost me practically nothing.

"But aside from the profit the bees afford us a great deal of entertaining study. Nothing can be more interesting than watching the manner in which these busy little workers keep their houses in order, the manner in which the guard bees of each swarm do sentinel duty at the entrance to their hive, ready to give battle to robber bees from other swarms, which are always lurking about, ready to steal from other hives instead of going out and foraging for honey.

"Some people may ask how the bees are fed. The answer is that we never feed them. I never have found it necessary to help them find enough food. Of course, they have no trouble in the warm weather, and while they stay close to their hives during the cold weather, as soon as the sun appears the bees leave their hives and go out foraging.

"Anybody can raise bees if he has some kind of shelter for them and will start right. They are no trouble to their owner or to their neighbor. I have the Italian bees and they never harm any one."

When the egg passage becomes congested the hen may burst a blood vessel in her efforts to expel the egg and a few days later she will show signs of weakness, the comb will turn dull, the temperature fall low and the bird will die.

The first symptoms are the drooping of the wings, roughing of the feathers and loss of energy.

It is a good plan to keep the pullets and the old hens separated because the hens fatten much quicker than the pullets on the same feed.

If a hen is suffering from inflammation of the egg passage, the egg must be removed soon or the bird will die. This may be accomplished by covering the finger with vaseline and inserting it into the egg passage, meanwhile pressing gently on the left side with the other hand.

Usually this will expel the egg and then the passage should be washed out with a weak solution of carbolic acid by means of a small syringe. A tablet of homeopathic nux vomica—1100 given in the water for two or three days will effect a complete cure.

The hen must, of course, be fed very lightly for some time until her flesh has been reduced.

SHEEP RAISING AND WHEAT GROWING FEASIBLE AND LUCRATIVE COMBINATION

Ability to Utilize and Turn Into Account What Would Otherwise Be Wasted Products Is Determining Factor—First Step Is to Provide Good Fences.

(By W. F. STEVENS, Live Stock Commissioner of Province of Alberta.)

As swine growing is the natural adjunct of dairying, so sheep is the natural accompaniment of extensive wheat farming. The ability to utilize and turn to account what would otherwise be waste products is the determining factor in each case.

The by-products of the wheat farm are weeds, volunteer grains and grasses, weed seeds, shriveled grain and straw. The first four, sheep will utilize to better advantage than will any other kind of live stock, and only beef cattle and horses will surpass sheep in turning wheat straw to account.

Another reason why sheep should appeal to the extensive wheat farmer is that once he has installed the proper equipment such as fences, open sheds and watering places, they interfere little with his field work. In fact, it is very doubtful if the extra work they occasion during the busy season is not more than offset by the labor they save on the summer fallow in the way of soil packing, weed eradication and the spreading of manure.

Another fact worth considering is that the presence of a flock of sheep on a grain farm does not necessitate a material reduction in the area devoted to grain growing, but on the other hand it never fails to insure a larger yield of better grain, and it makes possible the growing of grain for a longer period of years than can be done without them, or some other kind of livestock.

A certain amount of technical knowledge regarding sheep, their habits, etc., is necessary to success, but the same is equally true of all classes of animals, and amateurs should acquire this knowledge with a small flock in order that their mistakes do not cost them too dearly.

The first step to be taken when embarking in the business of sheep raising is to enclose at least one field with a coyote-proof fence. Additional fields similarly enclosed should be provided as occasion requires, or one's means permit. An effective dog coyote-proof fence can be made by using a woven wire fence four feet high and attached to the inside of the posts. A strand of barbed wire should be run along the surface of the ground, and another about six inches above the top of the woven wire fence. These should be attached to the outside of the posts. This arrangement makes burrowing under and vaulting over the fence from the outside very difficult. A woven wire fence 36 inches high with one strand of barbed wire above it is usually sufficient for inside or cross fencing.

The next step is to secure the right kind of sheep. When selecting these, two things should be kept well in mind. They must be of a breed that are noted for being quick to get on their feet after being lambled, else they will require a great deal of attention at lambing time, which, coming as it does in the midst of seeding, the farmer can ill afford to give, and they must be well woolled on the under line, else they will spend too much time about the shelter during the winter months; they will require much more hand feeding and be much more likely to contract disease than they would if they got out every day on clean ground and in the clear air and sunlight.

In managing a flock of sheep it should be remembered that a variety of feed is indispensable. When they are on succulent feed, they should have daily access to dry roughage; when they are on dry feed they should have occasional access to something succulent. A little attention to this important matter will prevent loss from indigestion which has probably caused greater losses among farmers' flocks than any other ailment. A field of native prairie or of brome grass in which there is a pile of straw or a rack of hay to which they can go at will, in order to get a change of feed while cleaning the summer fallow, and another field sown to winter rye early in August, to which they can go occasionally for succulent feed during the winter and spring months, are all that is necessary.

A word of caution may not be out of place in this connection. Turning a hungry sheep on wet rye is very likely to result in bloating. Therefore if the sheep do not have constant access to the rye field, be sure that their appetites are fairly well satisfied and that all dew and raindrops are dried off before the sheep are turned in.

The present is a favorable time to secure foundation stock, because they can still be purchased at moderate prices. The sheep ranchers of the western states are reducing their herds because of scarcity of pasture, and the large numbers going to market are keeping prices at a low level; but once this reduction of herds stops, prices will rise. They will probably not soar as have the prices of cattle and horses, because the frozen meat of Australia and New Zealand will be drawn on to prevent excessive high prices, but the trade that refuses to accept the frozen article is sufficiently large to permit of a material advance in mutton prices, and this advance is sure to take place as soon as the big ranges have been depleted.

HANGING OSTRICH PLUME

If it falls below her knees so much the better for its modishness; and when the breezes blow too strenuously, it may be twisted around her neck to make a becoming feather boa. For this is the last whim of Paris in the way of hat feathers—the drier the millinery. If one has to economize a trifle a long plume may hang from the back of the hat; if expense is absolutely no object there is no reason why it should not encircle the hat before starting on its downward journey. The plume pictured here is a soft, rich green shade and is attached to one of the stiff-brimmed derby shapes of black velvet.

WHEN THE SAND MAN COMES PRETTY TIES AND JABOTS

How One Mother Does Away With the Fretfulness That Sometimes Precedes Bedtime.

About half an hour before nap-time, Junior is washed and given a cup of milk. Then I set him in his high-chair and give him something that he can play with quietly for some time. If he still seems hungry, I give him a piece of zwieback or a crust of toast, that will keep him busy for a long season. Then, he has a music box and some cards and a disreputable clothespin doll, that we call his "Quiet-time Playthings," and do not let him see at any other time. If he is very restless and I have the time, we go into the sitting-room, darken it, and I play softly and sing the dear old melodies, that make my voice tremulous with memories of my childhood. Sometimes we put a rug in daddy's big chair, and Junior rocks slowly and croons a "sleepy song" with me.

When nap-time comes, I take off his shoes and prepare him for bed in the usual way, lay him down in the quiet room, shut the door, and if he is not already asleep, he calls happily after me—

"Bye-bye."

Do you see the principle of the thing? But of course you do. From the time he wakes in the morning until nap-time, the child grows more and more tired if left to himself; and when it finally comes time for his nap, he is too excited and weary to want it. The old way of rocking the baby to sleep, objectionable as it was in many respects, had this very important virtue, that it soothed and prepared the tired little brain and nerves for the coming nap.—Home Progress Magazine

IN THE LATEST MODE

Colifore de Soiree of Brilliants and a Black Feather.

Many women have already taken to the Tam o' Shanter, which has been hovering on the brink of popularity since the beginning of the season, and in its winter form it is likely to be much in vogue. The stage often, if not always, leads the way, and one of the prettiest black velvet hats of this shape is worn in a play recently produced. This is quite unrelieved black. A pretty variant of the Tam o' Shanter style is in blue felt with a black taffeta crown and a black aigrette at the side.

The fashion of having color and material combinations is going to be very general this season. Silk and felt, silk and velvet, silk and plush will be artistically combined, and the black underbrim with white crowns will be a feature in modish millinery for the autumn season.

Tunics Add Height.

The new tunics, which are open at the front and draped at each side, have the appearance of adding to the height.

NAMED THE FIRST REQUISITE

Bright Boy May Have Lacked Originality, But He Surely Had Correct Answer.

"This brave man, beloved by all France, was then buried with full military honors," a Baltimore boy read from the lesson, when his name had been called.

"What are 'military honors' in this connection?" the teacher asked, and several boys seemed to be possessed of the right idea.

"And what must one be to receive such honors?" was the next question. "A general?" "A hero?" "A captain?" were a few of the tentative replies. Only the "bright boy" of the class remained silent.

"Have you no answer, James?" the teacher suggested, "what must one be?"

"Why, I should say dead, Miss Mary," was the reply.

RIGHT IN IT.

"I wouldn't like to be Jimmy Spider, would you?"

"Why not?"

"Well, he has eight eyes, and when he wants to see the ball game he has to find eight knotholes in the fence."

FACE ALMOST COVERED WITH PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS

Atchison, Kan.—"For a number of years I suffered very greatly from skin eruption. My face was very red and irritated, being almost covered with pimples and blackheads. The pimples were scattered over my face. They were a fine rash with the exception of a few large pimples on my forehead and chin. My face burned and looked red as if exposed to either heat or cold. It was not only unsightly but very uncomfortable. I tried several remedies but couldn't get any relief. I was recommended to use Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment."

"I applied the Cuticura Ointment in the evening, leaving it for about five minutes, then washing it off with Cuticura Soap and hot water. I washed with the Cuticura Soap and hot water also several times during the day. After about four months of this application, my face was cleared of the pimples. I still use the Cuticura Soap." (Signed) Miss Elsie Nielsen, Dec. 29, 1911.

BAD BACKS DO MAKE WORK HARD

Backache makes the daily toil, for thousands, an agony hard to endure. Many of these poor sufferers have kidney trouble and don't know it. Swollen, aching kidneys usually go hand in hand with irregular kidney action, headache, dizziness, nervousness and despondency.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, the best-recommended kidney remedy.

Here's an Ohio Case

"I was in awful condition, having run down in weight from 200 to 150 pounds. The pains in the small of my back were constantly growing worse and the kidney secretions troubled me greatly. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me after doctor's failed, and I have had no trouble since."

FREE-TRADE TARIFF REVISION PRICES

Carload of Hay, $4.85; Wheat, 45 Cents a Bushel; Corn, 20 Cents; Eggs, 4 Cents a Dozen

Benton (Ill.) Republican.

When I hear a farmer say he is going to vote for Roosevelt or Wilson I can't keep from wondering if he has forgotten the time we had, and the prices we received for the fruits of our labor under the last Cleveland administration. And I wonder if they realize that a vote for Roosevelt is a half vote for Wilson, and if Wilson is elected we will surely have another taste of hard times.

To the farmer who has been on the farm as long as I have, there is no need to remind them of the prices we received, but to the younger ones I want to quote a few sample deals I made with Benton merchants, etc.

I sold eggs to the Benton stores at 4 cents a dozen, and one time Bob Hoskinson had so many he would not take them at that price.

I bought a number of four and five year old mules at $50 a head.

I took wheat to McCall & Whittington's mill and sold it at 45 cents a bushel, and they assured me that the days of the 60-cent wheat had passed. By the way, it seems to be passed now, but it has passed upward.

I shipped a car of hay to St. Louis to Schulte & Co. When it reached its destination there were 152 cars on the tracks. After paying freight, storage charges, etc., I received a check for $485 for the entire car, and the commission company kindly knocked off all their commission charges. Had the firm charged me the regular commission, I would have been indebted to them $3.

I bought two loads of fine corn in February from Marion Parks at 20 cents a bushel.

This is only a few samples, and I hope our farmers will wake up and vote to keep another "Tariff for revenue only" administration out of power. The paramount issue in this campaign is prosperity. We have it. Let's vote to keep it.

Justus Goebel Makes Strong Appeal for Protection To People's Interests

In Open Letter He Asks That Lawyers Known To Be Loyal To the Cause Of the People and Free From Corporation Taint Be Employed In the Suits Against Tax-Dodging Corporations

OPEN LETTER.

Frankfort and Covington, Ky., October 31st, 1912.

To His Excellency, Governor James B. McCreary: To all Administrative and Legislative officers of the State and to all citizens of the Commonwealth who are interested in equal and uniform taxation:

"Tell my friends to be brave and fearless and loyal to the great common people."

These last words of my assassinated brother, William Goebel, have a sacred significance to me and when in September, 1909, I again commenced to take an active interest in our State's affairs, it was not to gain political favor, for there is no office I would have; but it was with hope and confidence that my work would, during the administration of the present state officers, open up an opportunity for Kentucky to take up William Goebel's work where the assassin's bullet had interrupted it, and in that event every department of our government would give thereto by voice and action most positive, vigorous and loyal support.

Relief Must Come.

Necessity for action in the interest of the people has grown as years have passed until it has developed into what is today a crying shame and from which relief must come.

Too long, altogether too long, has there been unjust discrimination against the people, unjust and burdensome taxation upon the people, as compared with what has been required to be paid by the big corporations of our State. Corporation lawyers have been boasting the death of William Goebel was a benefit to the corporations. If this was true, the question is, how much longer shall the people be held in bondage because of his death?

God knows the corporations now suing the State have been able to procure (and the word procure is used advisedly) immunity long enough from paying their just share of the taxes.

A hundred million dollar increase in the value of corporation property for taxation opens a new era in the State's affairs, and has awakened the people, and brought them to a realization of what has been done to them, and there will be a further awakening, which will correct abuses equally as great as unequal taxation. A true awakening of the people has come, and henceforth every man who would hold office must be a progressive, and no limitation will satisfy them; they will sweep aside and into oblivion as old chaff any man who hesitates or dares stand in the way of betterment of conditions and improvement in every way for the whole people.

Gross Undervaluation.

No one doubts, had William Goebel been permitted to live, that which was done last month by the Board of Valuation and Assessment would have been done more than a decade ago, and to-day, instead of the large corporations fighting in the courts and by sinister methods, endeavoring to perpetuate unjust and unequal taxation, to throttle the action of this State Taxing Board, the first to act fully in the interest of the people, they would long ago have been paying into the State, county and city treasuries their just proportion of taxes.

It is very evident that in Kentucky, as in other States, big corporations will never pay a cent more of taxes than they are made to pay.

Take the case of the C. & O. R. R. In 1911 this road, on its entire system in Kentucky, paid taxes on a total valuation of only $9,313,270, whereas the street railway company of the city of Louisville was made to pay on a valuation of $10,800,000. The C. & O. R. R. in 1901 paid taxes on a franchise valuation of only $2,171,138, and in 1911 on a valuation of only $5,743, JUSTUS GOEBEL. GOV. J. B. MCCREARY.

Kentucky Delegates From State at Large to DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CONVENTION, BALTIMORE, JUNE, 1912.

$50, whereas the Board found their 1912 assessment should be $18,798,630. The C. & O. R. R. in 1901 paid taxes on a franchise valuation of only $3,110,197, and in 1911 on a valuation of only $3,559,320, whereas the Board found their 1912 assessment should be $10,674,200. The I. C. in 1901 paid taxes on a franchise valuation of only $1,989,870, and in 1911 on a valuation of only $4,510,320, whereas the Board found their 1912 assessment should be $45,428,074.

The Covington companies in the past paid as little, proportionately, as did most of the above mentioned companies, and without exception all these companies and the two others suing wanted the same assessments for 1912 that they had in 1911. The Board of Valuation and Assessment based their 1912 assessments on convincing proof of values placed before them, and the assessments are uniformly just and fair, and of the more than four hundred corporations assessed, only seven have protested in the courts, and these are among those that have always proportionately paid the least.

In the last twelve years the State, counties and cities have been robbed, and the word robbed is the only word that fits the case, of more than ten million dollars in taxes.

In the years from 1902 to 1911, inclusive, a period of ten years, there has been an average increase in the franchise assessments of the four largest railroads of the State of only 1½ per cent yearly, and this almost unbelievable record of astonishingly small increases was made in the ten best years for earnings that the railroads of this country ever saw.

The picture here presented of the previous inadequate franchise assessments is astounding, but when one examines into the situation regarding the tangible assessments made by Railroad Commissions of the properties of six of the corporations now suing the State, the word "astounding" is inadequate and must be here supplanted by the word "dismaying" to state more correctly what the tangible assessment picture actually presents.

Work Is Delayed a Decade.

Take the case of the C. & O. R. R. and the records show that the tangible property of this company in 1892, twenty years ago, was assessed at $8,019,577. In 1911 notwithstanding the extensions made in mileage of road, double tracking of a vast system, acquiring much new real estate and probably more than doubling their equipment of engines and cars this company's tangible property was assessed at only $6,270,270, or 21½ per cent less than in 1892, twenty years ago.

In 1892 the market price of C. & O. stock was around 11 cents, and to-day the stock of this company is selling at $15 cents, and the capital stock has been increased to one hundred million dollars. Further comment to show that our state has been robbed is unnecessary. The tangible property of the C. & O. R. R. was assessed in 1911 for less than it was assessed in 1900, and but little more than in 1890, notwithstanding the great improvements made by the company. The other railroads have been similarly inadequately assessed on their tangible property for many years.

In May, 1910, a prominent official of one of the companies suing, stated that the special interests had in years past controlled the state's taxing boards, and the records apparently prove he told the truth in that instance. He also stated that he would control the present Board of Valuation and Assessment, but in this he has proven an ignominious failure.

Board Acts For People.

To date the people have won, and the Board of Valuation and Assessment, consisting of Henry M. Bosworth, chairman; Tom S. Rhea and C. F. Creel, has finished its work for 1912, and, thank God, for once it has acted in the interest of the people. Until this year the Board of Valuation and Assessment has been controlled in the interest of the big corporations by some hook or crook, either friendship, political favor rendered or to be rendered, bribery or intimidation, but never before has the state, county or city been given what it was rightfully entitled to.

The eight suits that have been brought against the state must be fought through all federal and state courts, and are of vital importance to our people. They involve for the state $382,389, and for the county and city taxing districts $823,396, or a total, annually, of $1,205,785.

The railroad companies, realizing the magnitude of this fight and anxious to win out, not alone from a financial standpoint, but to prevent the great public denunciation that is bound to come in the wake of a victory for the state, are calling up the wonderful array of legal talent that is at their command through the power and influence that comes of the tremendous amount of money represented in their combined capitalization of approximately one billion dollars.

Master Legal Minds.

Among the master legal minds that are already engaged in preparing the defense of the suing corporations are Trabue, Dolan & Cox, of Louisville, for the Illinois Central Railroad Company; Galvin & Galvin, of Cincinnati, for the Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas Pacific Railroad Company; John T. Shelby & Son, of Lexington, for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Company; Col. Henry L. Stone, Helm Bruce, C. H. Moorman, R. A. Colston, of Louisville, and Browder & Browder, of Russellville, for the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company; Beckham & McQuown, of Frankfort, and Ernst, Cassatt & Cottle, of Cincinnati, for the South Covington & Cincinnati Street Railway Company and the Union Light, Heat and Power Company; Maxwell, Ramsey & Graydon, of Cincinnati, for the Adams Express Company and for the Southern Express Company.

In addition to this galaxy of legal talent, the suing corporations have a vast army of busy workers who never appear in the limelight or in the courtroom, and they may be described as research lawyers, accountants and statisticians, who are a mighty supportive element to the men who will present the cases and make the pleas and arguments.

Without detracting one iota from the splendid ability and known loyalty to the state's interests possessed by the attorney general, James Garnett, and his three assistants, the commonwealth's legal force, as compared with that of the corporations, must seem inadequate, indeed;—and when it is taken into consideration that the attorney general's office has a multiplicity of cases and matters of state to fully employ their attention, and that the present situation comes in the nature of an emergency unforeseen and unprecedented in the state's history, the urgent necessity for the employment of other able lawyers as a supportive force to the attorney general becomes quite apparent.

Ability, known loyalty to the cause, and assured freedom from corporation taint should be the gauge to govern in the selection of attorneys to assist in the defense of the state's interests.

Justus Goebel's Interest.

My interest in the work just completed by the board was, and is, different from, and greater than, that of any man in Kentucky or elsewhere—even though he may have been connected with the work. Love of my state and love for and memory of my assassinated brother, whose brainwork constructed and whose blood stained the statutes which made it possible to do what the Board of Valuation and Assessment has just completed, have compelled me to the service I have rendered in the matter, and, without official duty resting on me, I have given untiringly and almost constantly more than five months of time, energy and study to these assessments in the interest of the state and its people, to the exclusion of every other interest—business and personal.

Therefore, with such an interest and with the knowledge that I have gained through my labors, I feel that I am qualified, amply qualified, to make an appeal, in the name of the 400,000 taxpayers of the state who furnish seven-eighths of the revenue for the state's government, and who for many years have withstood the burden of unequal taxation, to the administrative and legislative officers of the state to support the governor with unlimited means for the necessary defense of the people's interest and cases.

There are men who have said in places that in the employment of Attorney John L. Rich the state had gone far enough, but to such men I would say, "Is your only interest the welfare of the people, and have you proven that there is no other interest that is greater with you than the people's interest?"

Every Citizen Interested.

We have been, and are, dealing in this with a matter which is vital to, and affects the comforts of every home, no matter how humble, and the pocketbook of every taxpayer in the commonwealth, be he laborer, mechanic, farmer, merchant or of any other rank or station. All have their interest in what we have been fighting for—more nearly equal taxation and relief from corporation oppression.

The question is, shall the cause of our taxpayers be defended at the bar of justice by an array of counsel of the correct standard and in keelag with the greatness and importance of these cases, which involve, not only $1,205,785 this year, but millions upon millions in years to come, and if the assessments are upheld, mean to this generation and generations yet unborn in Kentucky, lesser tax to pay, and to the state, adequate revenue for every purpose of government, economically conducted.

"Most respectfully yours,
"JUSTUS GOEBEL"

The DEAD CITY of CAJAMARQUILLA

Charles Warren Currier, Ph. D.

Of the thousands of people who inhabit Lima, or of the many who, in the winter months, take a run up to Chosica, on the Oroya railway, there is probably not one in a hundred who knows anything of Cajamarquilla. I was about to leave the capital of Peru without dreaming that, within a stone's throw, there were slumbering the ruins of a prehistoric civilization that had not yet passed away when Pizarro laid the foundation of the City of the Sovereigns.

The sacred city of Pachacamac is known to, and mentioned by every traveler who includes Lima within the limits of his itinerary. It has been visited and described from the days of the Conquistadores with more or less accuracy, until Dr. Max Uhle made a special study of it and published his monumental work. If these ruins of the Lurin valley are world famous, it is not thus with those of the valley of the Rimac, and if Pachacamac is part of the city is buried would indicate remote antiquity, and a possible destruction of the place long before the advent of the Europeans, were it not for what Estete tells us. Miguel Estete accompanied Hernando Pizarro from Caxamarca to Pachacamac, at the time when Atahualpa's people were scouring the country to collect sufficient gold for the ransom of their unfortunate chief. He gives us the itinerary of Hernando day by day until the return to Caxamarca. Wherever he goes he finds the country thickly populated with towns and villages, surrounded by cultivated fields of maize and orchards, with flocks of a kind of sheep. He judges that Pachacamac is of considerable antiquity, and he finds within it a certain number of ruins. No mention is made of Cajamarquilla, yet it is probable that his journey led him through the valley of the Rimac, and Markham even supposes that he passed over the present site of Lima.

According to Midden-dorf, who infers his statement from Estete's narrative, the valley was at that time thickly populated, having besides many smaller places three large towns, Huadca, now Huadca, Armataambo, and Cajamarquilla. Huadca, he says, was the principal town of the district. Its ruins still exist between Lima and the village of Magdalena, but they seem to be even less known than those of Cajamarquilla.

The valley, together with the entire coast, was overrun and conquered by the Incas, a century or more before the arrival of the Spaniards, about the time that these lords of the Peruvian uplands imposed their rule on the Grand Chimú farther north and on Pachacamac. Though there is little or nothing to indicate an Inca occupation at Cajamarquilla, it is quite likely that after the conquest its population more or less mingled with the conquerors. To judge from the names of places in the conquered districts, the victors imposed their language, no doubt gradually supplanting the original tongue of the valleys and coastlands. Caxamarca is a Quechua name, meaning "rock city." Cajamarquilla is the Spanish diminutive of Caxamarca. The city in the Rimac valley was thus called Little Caxamarca, to distinguish it, no doubt, from that other Caxamarca to the north, so intimately connected with the sad history of Atahualpa.

Among old writers who have treated of the coast people that preceded the Incas, Don Francisco de Avila, priest in the principal village of Huachichil, may be profitably consulted. His work was translated and published by Sir Clement Markham, in the forty-eighth volume of the Hakluyt series.

Unfortunately, Cajamarquilla furnishes little data to the archaeologist. It contains no inscriptions, no works of art, and its pits have been opened and searched, probably by treasure hunters, who have long since carried off any objects of value they may have contained. Yet the ruins are of the greatest interest for the beauty of their situation, their general plan, and their adobe architecture. Cajamarquilla must rank as one of the finest remains of that mysterious pre-Inca civilization which existed on the coast between the Pacific ocean and the mighty Andean ranges. Unlike the massive ruins on Lake Titicaca, or the oft-mentioned Pachacamac, it has attracted little attention on the part either of tourist or scientist, and its history does not exist. Yet a careful study of its houses, with their apartments, of its streets, and of its burial places may, I think, throw some light on the mode of life of the primitive people that once dwelt within it. The ethnologist may also find some material in the skulls that lie scattered throughout the ruined city, or buried in its pits.

As you wander through the Rimac valley and contemplate its vast solitudes and crumbling ruins, you ask yourself, what has become of the population. Alas, what has become of the Indian population of the West Indies, and where are our Indians of the United States? They have melted away before Caucasian civilization.

Some day a patient explorer and archaeologist may pitch his tents among the ruins of Cajamarquilla to study them in detail and force them to reveal some of their secrets. At least he may give us a plan of the city, and reconstruct it, drawing some from its confusion.

For the present, Cajamarquilla is a mystery. It has neither history nor tradition; no legends cluster around it; its existence is ignored; even archaeologists appear to neglect it. It is, in very truth, a dead city of the desert.

CEMETERY OF NIVERA NEAR CAJAMARQUILLA

known to all, solitary Cajamarquilla is buried in an obscurity as deep as the sand that covers it, while few, very few, authors even make mention of it.

I said that I was about to leave Lima. It was the eve of my departure when I learned from Professor Saville, of New York, the well-known Ecuadorian explorer, that he had visited the ruins that very day. How I wished that I could have accompanied him! I concluded that regrets were useless, and I was about to relinquish all hope of ever seeing the old Peruvian city, when I learned that the departure from Callao of the Ucayali had been postponed for a day. Communicating this fact to Doctor Saville, he most graciously volunteered to accompany me on the morrow. It was an opportunity I readily grasped.

Thus it happened that we met by appointment at the Lima station of the Oroya railroad at 8:30 on a morning early in July. Gray clouds, as usual, hung heavily over the city when we boarded the train, which soon pulled out of the station, to begin the steep journey up the Andean slopes. A little way outside of Lima the sun was shining in a cloudless sky, scattering its rays through an atmosphere as transparent as any you could wish to see in Castile or Aragon. Here and there on the route the adobe ruins of pre-Inca civilization might be observed, for the Rimac valley is richer in such ruins than any other part of the coast.

The morning was bright and exhilarating when we arrived at Santa Clara railway station. Leaving Mrs. Saville to proceed to Chosica, the professor, his young son, and myself alighted. A little mule car, run on tracks, awaited us. It might accommodate about nine persons. We sprang to the seats, the driver whipped up his mules, and off we were on the long, sandy road between fields of sugar cane. Poor mules, cut and bleeding, how we pitted them! But in those countries animals are handled without mercy.

A run of a couple of miles or more, passing on the way the little train that is used to haul the cape, or carry the laborers, we arrived near the dwelling of the hacienda, now leased, I understand, by Chinese. Some distance from the house we alighted, to continue the journey on foot in the direction of the mountains. For a while we had a good, though dusty road, but the greater part of the journey had to be made through sandy plains, which did not improve our personal appearance, so that we presented a picture of dust and wretchedness on our return to the Hotel Maury in Lima. Our way was now and then obstructed by adobe walls, or by the canals used for irrigation, and over these we had to climb or jump. It was not long before we caught sight of the ruins, solitary and abandoned. With the exception of a herd of cattle and the mounted herdsmen, besides an occasional buzzard or vulture, no living being was in sight.

Cajamarquilla lies about 23 miles from Lima, as you ascend the valley of the Rimac, but in a wide valley, in a plain among the spurs of the Andes. The valley is watered by a canal, dug, probably, at a period antedating the advent of the Spaniards. In the vicinity are several haciendas, such as Huachipa and La Nivera, and an occasional "tambo" or rural inn, where, if you care to, some kind of refreshment may be had. These, however, are hardly visible from the ruins, near which one solitary hut is to be seen. Years ago, when Squier visited the place, the ruins were the haunt of robbers that gave no little trouble to the Peruvian authorities, but the railroad has driven them out of business, and it is now quite safe to visit Cajamarquilla. In fact, the thought of robbers was not connected in my mind with Cajamarquilla, until I read Squier's work.

During our brief stay among the ruins it was impossible to make anything like measurements, except with the eye, but as far as the vision extended towards the mountain we saw nothing but ruins which stretched to a great distance to right and left. Toward the river they seemed to melt away into the plain. Squier says that they cover an area of nearly a square league, and Midden-dorf estimates their extent at four square kilometers. From my observations, the ruins consist of houses built of immense adobe blocks, closely adjoining each other, here and there separated by streets. Some of the houses consist of several apartments. Admission is gained through a low doorway, but nowhere is there a sign of a window. As in Pompeii, the roofs, whatever may have been the material of their construction, have long since fallen in. Outside the buildings, the soil has risen to a great height, sometimes nearly to the top of the wall, but inside the walls the depth gives an idea of the original height of perhaps 10 feet or more. Toward the mountain, a large portion of the city is almost completely buried in the sand, which in the course of ages has come drifting down from the hills. There are within the city a few elevations or small hills, which may have been occupied by temples or forts. Pits are everywhere within and without the houses, with a width of from two to four and a depth ranging from six to twenty feet or more. Human remains in the shape of skulls and bones are found within the pits or scattered over the ground, together with bits of pottery and other articles, such as corn-cobs, which were probably interred with the dead. Some of these pits are said to have served the purposes of storehouses or granaries, while others were certainly graves. The inhabitants of the city buried their dead within or in the immediate vicinity of their houses, although the mass of the people must have used the necropolis, some distance away from the residences. Many of these pits, excavated in the hard soil, are in the form of a jar or urn, while others are square. Squier thus describes the ruins as he saw them:

"These consist of three great groups of buildings and around the central mass, with streets passing between them. It would be impossible to describe this complicated maze of massive adobe walls, most of them still standing, albeit much shattered by earthquakes, or to convey an idea of the pyramidal edifices, rising stage on stage, with terraces and broad flights of steps leading to their summits."

He adds that the history of the place has been lost to tradition. As standing on an eminence, surrounded by the ruins, with the silence of death upon you, you look down upon what was once a city, capable of containing a population of ten or twelve thousand, you wonder what people dwelt there. The accumulation of soil and the fact that a large

LOOKED WELL AS ANYBODY

Portly Lady Was Not Wasting Thought as to Her Appearance in Bathing Suit.

Mrs. Stockwell stood on the beach bathing suit. The tide was low was a stretch of shining sand and the breakers. "I who sat a few beach could see arm in profile."

but she had seen her thus in her amplitude every day at bathing hour for many weeks and the phenomenon no longer aroused her wonder. "What a nice rubber cap you have, Mrs. Stockwell," remarked the petite girl, as Mrs. Stockwell raised her fat arms in the act of drawing her cap over her hair. "It's good enough," was the breathless response. "Keeps my hair dry."

And what do you think of my suit?" "All right," said the petite girl, politely.

Mrs. Stockwell laughed oleagiously, her portly person shaken to its foundations by the act. "Why, it's nothing but an old suit," said she, "but it's good enough. The summer's over now, I wouldn't get a new one. It's not stylish, I suppose. But I can't see as I don't look as well as anybody else. Nobody looks nice," she went on, sweeping the dainty figure of the petite girl with a stern and critical glance. "There was only one woman here this summer whose bathing suit was becoming, and she's gone home. We all of us look funny and I don't look funnier than any other else." And with this parting remark Mrs. Stockwell rolled gelatinously down into the sea and dipped three times.

"RUBE" AND THE GIRL

By L. Z. BURTON.

"How much longer can I stand it? How much longer—how long—how long—how long?"

The words drummed in her ears at every beat of the music; every note made the pain in her head more acute, as Nellie Day (whose name on the program was Mlle. Eleanor Diem) pirouetted and coquetted in the maze of her dance.

Mlle. Diem was the premiere danseuse of a small company playing "The Circus Lady," a melodrama of the most mellow order, doing one-night stands in the middle west.

Although Nell was the pet of the show, she had incurred the disapproval of Henry Sweeney, the big, rough manager, because lately she had "fallen off" in her high kicking and whirling act.

Sweeney had glared at her and muttered an oath at the end of the first act, and now she knew a sharp scolding would greet her when she returned to the dingy dressing room.

Making her last bow, she smiled right into the eyes of the "Rube" that had followed the show from place to place for over a week, who every night had occupied a front seat, who had paid scant attention to the other players, but who always led the applause when Mlle. Diem appeared.

The other members of the company teased Nell in a good-natured way about the "mash" she had made on the "Rube."

Lil and Kid Clay (the Clay sisters) told her she was a fool not to go out to supper with him after the show.

"If you are so tired of this life, why don't you lay off a while and get him to put up for you? He's got the coin!"

"You girls don't understand. He ain't the kind we've been used to. He's good. He never asked me to go to supper after the show, but he took me ridin' in the country once."

"He asked me to call him Theo. His name's Theophilus Sykes. Ain't that a name for you?"

As the curtain descended with the last blare of a horn, Nell sank in a little heap on the stage—a heap of crumpled pink tulle, spangles and cheap satin. Sweeney growled out a word or two about "incompetents" and "sick folks," but had her carried to the building that bore the name of hotel.

Then she was put to bed and dosed with bad whisky and water, which failed to revive her.

Next day the company was forced to continue its tour, leaving Nell behind in care of the slatternly wife of the hotel manager. Theophilus, hearing of her illness, also remained. He it was who saw that her room was made bright with flowers, wild flowers that he gathered in the country lanes early in the morning, when the dew was fresh upon them. He it was who fetched the doctor from a neighboring town, and who paid for such delicacies as could be obtained at the general store on Main street.

The day she was able to sit up in the big, old-fashioned rocking chair beside her bed the Rube brought a magnificent bunch of roses and a large box of bonbons tied with wide pink ribbon. These had been sent from Chicago.

He laid them in her lap; then taking her frail, little hand in his big, brown one he stroked the back of it with the tips of his fingers and in a faltering voice hesitated and stumbled through a proposal of marriage.

"Maybe I'm a Rube, little girl; but I kin take keer of you. Come home with me, home to the farm, and rest all you want to. I don't ask you to love me, yet; but just come 'en let me keer for you like I would my own little sister, if I had one."

Nell buried her face in the roses; their perfume filled the room. With a rush of feeling she knew she loved this man; this "Rube" that all her associates had ridiculed and joked about. But could she marry him?

"I—I can't marry you, Theo—I—oh, I'm not good enough to be your wife. You are too good—too honest for a girl like me. I—"

But she got no further. He held her face between his palms, looked straight into her big, brown eyes—eyes that did not waver as they returned his gaze.

"Little Nell," he said, "I ain't marryin' the girl you have been. I want the girl you are; the gentle, honest, sweet girl that I know is your real self. You must forget everything that happened to you before today. Don't talk about it; don't think about it. Begin to live today, now, the life you want to live; the pure, clean, sweet life of the open country. Marry me, and we'll go back home. Will you, Nell?"

"I needn't tell you about my life; that other life on the stage?"

"Not a word. You begin to live today a new life as my wife, Mrs. Theophilus Sykes."

Her body arched away and she buried her face on his shoulder. A little ray of sunlight falling through the window made her fair hair appear like a halo above her pretty head.

The Retort Vegetarian. "Carrots! Fine!" bawled the huckster.

"How many carrots fine?" queried the seedy looking chap sitting on the curbstone.

"Twenty-four—to the two dozen, you dead beet," promptly answered the huckster, an enterprising sophomore who was engaged in demonstrating that there is more than one way to earn your college tuition.

Long "Hello!" A class in a Harlem school was told to write letters about Peter Stuyvesant. "Hello!" wrote one pupil, addressing the famous chief of New Amsterdam. "I'm sorry your dead. Are you governor yet?" "He was a very beautiful and a very stubborn man," wrote another. "He was a very good man," observed another writer, "but I'll tell you what I know about him when I see you."

To Decorate a Bald Head.

"My husband," writes Mrs. Pezozelle to the chaperon, "was quite bald when I married him, although otherwise perfectly good. I first washed his head with a cleansing solution and a stiff brush; then I sandpapered it, starting with the rough paper and using each grade down to the finest. After that I rubbed it at intervals with my bare hand for several days and now it is lovely. It has all the dull rich finish so much admired and the natural grain shows beautifully."—Kansas City Star.

Superior Attraction.

One of the two women who sat near the front of the car had been to the theater the night before to see a certain beautiful actress.

"How does she hold her age?" eagerly asked the one who had not been. "Well, to tell you the truth, Mamie, she wore such a lovely pink dress that I couldn't take my eyes off it the whole time she was on the stage; so I never thought of looking at her face to see whether she held her age or not—I should say she did, though."

PHYSICIAN!

OPTICIAN!

Your physician can treat successfully all ordinary eye diseases. If an operation is necessary he will refer you to a REAL specialist in eye surgery. When glasses are necessary he will advise you to see the skilled optician, one who knows glasses from A to Z. He will tell you to go to Simpson because he knows that the man who specializes is the one to consult about his specialty.
